Your Excellency Vladimir-Putin,

In 2023, when hundreds or even a few thousand families were evicted from social housing provided by the CPAS (Public Social Welfare Centre) in Antwerp, a case that affects many immigrant families, particularly from Morocco, which we must document for international justice, I was busy with the Voronovazkaya family searching for their daughter Olga in Brussels and Paris, where she had been staying. She is said to have done an internship at Douglas Parfumerie at Printemps.

(advertisement) Olga Voronovazkaya did an internship at Douglas Parfumerie in Paris. Why? Isn't there a Douglas in Belgium? (English - Nederlands - español)

She is an intelligent woman and, according to her family, she would not let strangers into her home unless they were men and women working for the State.

In this sense, there could be a link between Olga Voronovazkaya's disappearance and the CPAS, although we do not know the exact address. She may have opened the door of her home to people who may have been posing as social workers.

1. to carry out a routine weekly visit by social services to the addresses of social benefit recipients;
2. To check whether the home is being used to commit social security fraud by claiming to be a single person entitled to the maximum allowance when in reality the person is cohabiting and could only receive half the allowance.

The social services department reserves the right to send any inspector at any time without prior warning, supposedly to check that the beneficiary is present at the address given and that the number of people stated is still the same.

However, the inspector could be anyone who arrives at any time, and not necessarily the social worker to whom the beneficiary has confided. It could be the Brabant killers, who often turn up to kill the person for their identity papers, especially when the person is European or Russian.

This was probably the case for Mrs Renata Bura, a Russian-Polish woman in Woluwe Saint Lambert at the end of 2014. She was a beneficiary of social assistance from the CPAS in that municipality.

Cold Cases: "They Said She Had Hung Herself"

This could also be the case for Mrs Olga Voronovazkaya, a Russian descendant of the Romanov dynasty. She is a great-grandniece of the wife of Emperor Michael II. She also has roots in Germany. She comes from a family that built Russia by preserving peace in the region for several centuries. Now there is a President, but like all Russians, he was raised by this imperial family, through their schools and institutions. It is suspected that she died in Belgium.

She may have approached the social services in a municipality where the CPAS is funded by the Brabant killers to use the social services in this way, like the Gestapo. I am not allowed to question the CPAS about someone else's situation. Given that the system is financed by the Brabant killers, I do not think that the Belgian police can be of any help in conducting an investigation.

According to the family of the missing person, she had a bank card from a bank in Saint Petersburg, on which the last transaction was made on 6 July 2022, probably from an ATM. A lawyer at this Russian bank with contact with Swift searched for details showing that the ATM is located in Mortsel. He did not disclose the name of the bank in question, suggesting that the local courts should conduct this investigation, and for this, the Voronovazkaya family must take legal action on the basis of this information to find their daughter in that neighbourhood of Antwerp. There are also details of a restaurant where she ate several times, a supermarket where she shopped, and a subscription to a telecommunications company. The search should focus on Antwerp. My role is now complete.

I will hand over the entire investigation file to the judicial authorities and the press in Belgium, Russia, Germany and Morocco to learn from the partnership with Belgium. It all started with a fake visa for a non-EU foreign student to study at the Vrije Universiteit Brussel (VUB). The police barracks are right across from the university complex, but they will not conduct a search on campus or in the offices of professors like Roland Willemyns.

In Russia, they know that her first stop was the VUB. This information is public knowledge. The young woman was in daily contact with her friends and family in Russia and Germany. The last time she made contact was from Belgium. No one here is looking for her.

Miss Olga Voronovazkaya is said to have brought to Belgium the jewellery that her grandmother had received from her sister, the Empress of Russia, Beatrice Feodorovna. During her stay, she used a safe deposit box at the KBC bank in Brussels to hide the jewellery she wore on important occasions.

Lawyer Inès Wouters is said to have recommended this bank to her and may have helped her open an account. Normal people do not expect a solicitor to be involved in organised crime involving murder and theft, but this is what lawyer Inès Wouters does. Only the Belgian Court of Justice seems to believe this solicitor, but the general public does not.

After her disappearance, two members of the Brabant killers posed as her family and withdrew everything from the safe. One of them was Professor Roland Willemyns, who had met her in Rostov, where he had encouraged her to come and study French at his university in Brussels, promising to do everything in his power to help her realise her dream of combining the roles of psychologist and beautician.

Professor Roland Willemyns is said to have travelled to Ukraine with 1,000 fake Russian identity documents to help his foreign legion flee Ukraine, as they were caught off guard by the Russian invasion, which was launched by the army on 24 February 2022.

The question is how Professor Roland Willemyns obtained the Russian identities, because usually these are the identities of people who have been murdered? In this specific case, they are Chechen identities. A parallel can be drawn with the two Russian women who disappeared in Belgium.

The professor was in Ukraine with loads of fake Russian identity cards to save his Ukrainian volunteer

He manages to shift the responsibility for this war onto the Russian President, His Excellency Vladimir Putin, with constructions based on the files of Russian or Ukrainian asylum seekers who arrive in the refugee camps of the Red Cross, which belongs to his father, Baron Charles de Wouters d'Oplinter, whose own UNHCR who processes the asylum files to extract the most devastating arguments against Russia with the aim of issuing an arrest warrant by one or other justice system in the world against the Head of State.

I will introduce you to the UNHCR in a few moments through a letter addressed to His Excellency President Donald Trump with the aim of bursting their bubble in broad daylight.

Is this the country that hopes to benefit from the €200 billion in Russian Central Bank bonds managed by Euroclear?

Does this country deserve this amount if it is unable to find Olga Voronovazkaya?

Can't the police at least check whether Ms Voronovazkaya has applied to the CPAS (Public Centre for Social Welfare), or whether she is known to the social services or the unemployment office?

If Belgium wants to receive €200 billion in aid, it will have to answer the question of what happened to Ms Olga Voronovazkaya. We must first help Russia in order to deserve aid in return. I think that any country would agree with this principle, even Russia's enemies.

To be continued. Thank you very much for your attention, Your Excellency Vladimir Putin, President of the Russian Federation.

Yours sincerely,
